How to use this journal

1. One page a day. Fill it in together after iftar or before bed. 5–10 minutes is enough.

2. Write the date yourself. The start of Ramadan depends on your local moon sighting or announcement, so the pages use “Day 1, Day 2, …”.

3. Go moon watching. Early in Ramadan, look for a thin crescent in the western sky after sunset. Mid-month, the full moon rises in the east. Draw what you see on the observation page.

4. Celebrate effort, not just results. A half-day fast for a young child is worth celebrating too. Cut out the badges at the back as rewards.

5. At the end of Ramadan, fill in the certificate and sign it together.

Fun ideas to do together

🍲 Make iftar snacks together and share them with neighbors.

🔭 Go “hilal hunting” on the first evening of Ramadan and before Eid.

🪙 Turn an old tin into a charity jar and open it at the end of Ramadan.

⭐ Decorate a room with paper moons and stars for the last ten nights.

The moon shapes in this journal are estimates and may differ slightly from the real sky. They are drawn as seen from the Northern Hemisphere; south of the equator the moon looks flipped. That's the fun part: compare them with your own observations!

The Moon I Saw

Each evening, look at the moon and shade the dark part. If it's cloudy, write “clouds”.

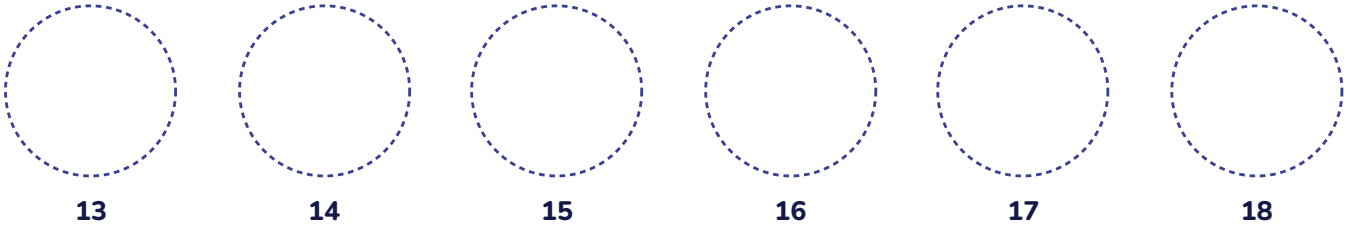

Start of Ramadan: a thin crescent in the west after sunset. · Middle: the full moon rises in the east. · End of Ramadan: the moon rises late at night, so look before dawn.
